KNICKS WIN NBA CHAMPIONSHIP

New York Knicks fans waited more than 50 years for this moment. On Saturday night, the Knicks beat the San Antonio Spurs 94-90 and won their first NBA championship since 1973.

The game was played in San Antonio, Texas, but the streets of New York were full of celebration too. Crowds filled parts of Manhattan, including areas near Times Square. Fans shouted, hugged, and celebrated late into the night.

Some Knicks fans even traveled to Texas to see the game in person. Elizabeth Madigan flew from New York to San Antonio before the game. She said she had waited almost her whole life for the Knicks to win again. "Knicks forever," she said after the victory.

The win ended decades of disappointment for the team. The Knicks had not reached the NBA Finals since 1999. That year, they also played the Spurs, but they lost. This time, they finished the job.

For many fans, it did not matter that the Knicks won away from Madison Square Garden, their famous home arena. New York was still full of excitement.

The city will hold a ticker-tape parade and a ceremony at City Hall to celebrate the championship. The mayor also asked fans to enjoy the night safely. After years of near misses and heartbreak, Knicks fans finally have another championship.
